Biggest Man-Eating Shark Is Captured Off Jersey Coast

Holmesville, N. J., July 27.--When Capt. Jack Benson's crew of pound sailers came in to the station of the ship bottom fishery on Long Beach, five miles above Beach Haven, yesterday they towed behind their motor boat a 600 pound shark ten feet eight inches in length, the largest captured since the man-eaters from Southern waters began their raid on the New Jersey coast.

Four other sharks were in the boat, two of them five footers and two four footers. All of them had been taken in the morning draw of the nets.

The ship bottom fishermen had a highly exciting battle with their ferocious game. The big shark, in particular tore around at great rate when drawn to the side of the boat. Capt.
Benson, a muscular man, pounded it repeatedly on the head with a heavy iron bar, finally dazing it enough to allow one of the hands to lasso its tail. Then the line was made fast and the shark was towed to shore tail first. Had the spunk not been beaten out of it it probably could have pulled the boat out to sea.

All of the five sharks were of one variety, blue with large spots; entirely strange to the Jersey coast. They have four rows of large teeth. The big fellow had an eighteen inch spread of mouth and was thirty inches in diameter at the thickest part of his body. He was shipped to Asbury Park for exhibition purposes.

BAKING POWDER.

Although baking powder is now used the world over, it was originally pulled from the boat out to sea.
All in much larger quantities in the United States and Canada than in other countries. The invention of modern commercial baking powder is usually attributed to Prof. Eben Norton Horsford, who was born at Moscow, N. Y., 35 years ago today. He became a civil engineer and chemist, and won wide fame in the latter science. In 1847 he joined the Harvard faculty and served with distinction as Rumford professor of applied science for 16 years. He then retired to become the head of a chemical concern in Providence and made a number of important chemical discoveries in addition to popularizing baking powder. That culinary article has come into general use only in the last half-century, but within a few years of its introduction in America it had almost entirely superseded the primitive way of making bread, bicuit, cakes, etc., by the use of yeast, sour milk and soda. In cheap baking powders alum is used as a substitute for cream of tartar or tartaric acid.
